A dating app made for trans and non-binary people.

T4TSpace is a dating app made for trans and non-binary people, open in any browser and coming to the app stores.

press@t4tspace.com reaches a person, not a form. Everything in this document can be used without asking us first. If what you need is not here, write and ask for it.

Use this description

T4TSpace is a dating app made for trans and non-binary people. Nobody's gender is checked. It runs in any browser and native apps are being built. The premise is that existing apps are made either for cis people seeking trans people, or for everyone at once, and that neither serves trans people looking for each other. Everyone who joins agrees, one by one, to three commitments about how they will treat the people they meet. Every field of a profile, including gender, pronouns, orientation and transition, can be shown to everyone, to matches only, or to nobody. The app tells each person the real number of people near them, whatever that number is. T4TSpace exists in seven languages and is operated from France under European data protection law.

In one line: T4TSpace is a dating app made for trans and non-binary people, open in any browser and coming to the app stores.

What we can confirm

Operator	TWAINO, a French company registered in Paris, SIREN 883 426 389.
Where it runs	Any browser. Native apps for Android and iOS are being built.
Languages	English, German, Polish, French, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian.
Hosting	Website at OVH in France. Application and database on servers in Munich, Germany.
Data	Gender identity, pronouns and orientation are special category data under Article 9 of the GDPR, consented to explicitly at sign-up.
Age	Adults only. Age is confirmed when the account is created.
Verification	A selfie looked at by a person, not an algorithm. Free, and required before anyone can see anyone; the selfie is deleted once decided and in any case within seven days. An account opens only once its email address is confirmed.
Price	Nothing is charged today, and the first thousand accounts stay free. Three amounts for the same product were published before the machinery to collect them existed, with nothing to prove for the lowest.
Palette	Derived from the transgender pride flag designed by Monica Helms in 1999. The flag belongs to nobody.

About numbers

We do not publish a user count, and we would rather say why than leave it unexplained. Registered users, matches made, satisfaction rates: every figure of that kind in this category is produced by the company that benefits from it, and none can be checked by anyone outside. Publishing ours would add one more unverifiable number to a field that already has too many.

What we do instead is inside the product. The app shows each person the real count of people within the distance they chose, and says that it is the real one. If it is four, it says four. It is the one number we stand behind, precisely because the person reading it can check it against who they actually see.

If you need a figure from us for a story, ask what it counts and how it was measured. We will answer that or decline it. We will not send you a round number with no method attached.

Five things you can check without asking us

- 1 No profile is indexed
The directive is in the page and in the HTTP response, on every profile URL. Being outed by a search result is the risk this closes.
- 2 Three commitments before the account exists
Not to ask anyone about their body or surgeries, not to ask for a name they no longer use, and to meet a person rather than a category. Start a sign-up and you will see them.
- 3 Visibility field by field
Gender, pronouns, orientation and transition are each set separately: everyone, matches only, or nobody.
- 4 Reports decided by a person
Within twenty-four hours, and the counts are published rather than described.
- 5 Prices published before charging
And still published while nothing is charged.

Logos and screenshots

Logo files in vector and in three pixel sizes, on transparent backgrounds, plus screenshots of the real interface, are at t4tspace.com/press/. The screenshots contain no invented profiles, which is why they show the parts of the product that need nobody else on screen.

What we ask

Use the mark as it is: please do not recolour, stretch, rotate, add effects to it, or rebuild it from a screenshot. Single-colour versions exist for coloured and photographic backgrounds.

The trans pride flag belongs to everyone, so its colours are not ours to police. Our mark is ours: placing it next to your own so that it reads as a partnership, an endorsement or a rating is the one use we will ask you to change.

Please do not add profiles to the screenshots, and please do not use them to illustrate a different app.
